Fed's New Brazen Economy Plan

Government will buy $600B in bonds to trigger cheap loans

Washington

The Federal Reserve announced a bold plan Wednesday to try to invigorate the economy by buying $600 billion more in Treasury bonds.

The Fed said it would buy about $75 billion a month in long-term government bonds through the middle of 2011 to further drive down interest rates on mortgages and other debt. This is in addition to an expected $250 billion to $300 billion in Fed purchases over the same period from reinvesting proceeds from its mortgage portfolio.

The idea is for cheaper loans to get people to spend more and stimulate hiring. The Fed said it will monitor whether adjustments are needed depending on how the economy is performing.

Some worry the Fed action will do little to boost the economy, because interest rates are already historically low. Others fear the bond purchases could drive inflation too high over the long term and unleash speculative buying in assets like stocks.

The stock markets, which had priced in the Fed's move for weeks, didn't move much after the announcement. The Dow Jones industrial average fell 26 points soon after.

But the 30-year Treasury bond, which will not be among the bonds targeted by the Fed's purchases, sank more than a point. Its yield jumped to 4.02 percent, up from 3.86 percent shortly before the announcement.

In announcing the action, the Fed said the pace of the economy continues to be slow. Companies remain reluctant to hire, housing activity is depressed, and consum-

Creating a Bubble

Many analysts and even supporters of the plan see dangers. It could make the weak dollar even weaker and lead to trade disputes with other countries. It could lead bond traders to believe that higher inflation is on the way, and the traders could derail the Fed's efforts by pushing rates higher. Some investors argue that it may create bubbles as hedge funds and other speculators borrow cheaply and make even bigger bets on stocks, commodities and markets in developing countries such as Brazil. ers are increasing their spending only gradually.

Thomas Hoenig, president of the Federal Reserve Bank of Kansas City, dissented for the seventh-straight meeting. He says the risks of the Fed's extra stimulus outweigh the potential benefits.

Fed policymakers expressed disappointment that they haven't been able to reduce unemployment and raise inflation to levels more in line with a healthy economy.

Live 3-D Video Not Science Fiction

New York

Scientists say they have taken a big step toward displaying live video in three dimensions — a technology far beyond 3-D movies and more like the "Star Wars" scene when a ghostly Princess Leia image pleads, "Help me, Obi-Wan Kenobi."

In that classic movie, the audience sees her back before a new camera perspective shows her face. Such a wraparound view of a moving image was just movie-trick fantasy in the 1977 film, but what about now?

"We have demonstrated the concept, that it works," said Nasser Peyghambarian of the University of Arizona.

"It's actually very, very close to reality. It's no longer something that is science fiction."

— NASSER PEYGHAMBARIAN, PHYSICIST AT THE UNIVERSITY OF ARIZONA.

Actually, the results he and colleagues report in Thursday's issue of the journal Nature look more like a slide show than a video. In experiments, the technology displayed a new image only every two seconds. That's only about one-sixtieth as fast as the system would need to produce true video.

The image also gave only a 45-degree range of viewing angles because the original was shot with 16 cameras laid out in an arc.

But Peyghambarian figures that with more development — and more cameras — his team can produce a true 3-D video screen that might reach living rooms in perhaps a decade. And you wouldn't need those funny glasses to enjoy it.

Apart from the possibilities for entertainment, it might allow doctors in multiple places around the world to collaborate on live surgery, he said. If the screen were placed flat on a table, they could get different angles of view by walking around, just as if the patient were lying there. MALCOLM RITTER (AP)

Law Limits Kid Meal Toys

San Francisco aims to curb giveaways to fight child obesity

San Francisco

For some veggies-hating children, Happy Meals won't be so happy anymore.

San Francisco's Board of Supervisors voted 8-3 on Tuesday to approve an ordinance that would limit toy giveaways in fast-food children's meals that have excessive calories, sodium and fat. It also requires servings of fruits or vegetables with each meal.

If the law survives an expected veto from Mayor Gavin Newsom, San Francisco would become the first major city in the country to pass such a law aimed at curbing childhood obesity. It would go into effect December 2011 if supervisors again approve it after Newsom's veto.

A similar ordinance has been approved in California's Santa Clara County.

Supervisors and activists who support the measure said they hoped obesity-curbing efforts like it would eventually spread to other cities, states and the country.

"From San Francisco to New York, the epidemic of childhood obesity in this country is making people sick, making our kids sick," said Supervisor Eric Mar, who proposed the law.

Scott Rodrick, an owner and operator of 10 McDonald's restaurants in the city, said after the vote that "there will be sales loss, there may be jobs impacted." Rodrick also pointed out that anyone could circumvent the law easily: "Someone doesn't have to travel very far to get the traditional McDonald's Happy Meals experience."

Concepcion Dawes, a 20-year-old mother of a 2-year-old, said she supports the ordinance.

"Fast food is really fattening, and it's really addicting, and sometimes it's hard to tell a child no," she said. TREVOR HUNNICKUTT (AP)

Afghan Election Probe Begins

Official: Focus is on criminal behavior, not fraud allegations

Kabul, Afghanistan

The Afghan attorney general's office has launched a number of criminal investigations into allegations that the country's election commission participated in fraud during parliamentary elections in September, officials said Wednesday.

Deputy Attorney General Rahmatullah Nazari said that his staff has begun investigating nine cases in which election officials, all but one of them at the Kabul headquarters of the Independent Election Commission, are accused of rigging votes.

Allegations by candidates about fraudulent activity in the elections have been pouring into the attorney general's office, Nazari said, but he added that his office is focusing

'Extraordinary Eruption'

Volcano's strongest blast yet sparks more fear in Indonesia

Mount Merapi, Indonesia

A deadly Indonesian volcano spewing lava and smoke for more than a week erupted Wednesday with its biggest blast yet, shooting searing ash miles into the air as soldiers hastily evacuated villages and emergency shelters.

One scientist warned the worst may be yet to come.

Women screamed and children cried as they were loaded into trucks while rocks and debris rained from the sky. Several homes were set ablaze, and carcasses of incinerated cattle littered the scorched slopes.

No new casualties were reported immediately after the booming explosion, which lasted more than an hour.

Indonesians dusted with ash flee Wednesday after Mount Merapi erupted again.

"This is an extraordinary eruption, triple from the first," on Oct. 26, said Surono, a state volcanologist.

More than 70,000 villagers have been evacuated from the 9,700-foot Mount Merapi's once-fertile slopes since it began erupting just over a week ago, killing 38 people and injuring dozens, most with severe burns.

There have been more than a dozen strong blasts in recent days — including a smaller one Wednesday morning — prompting some scientists earlier to say pressure building up behind a magma dome in the crater was slowly easing.

By nightfall, however, all bets were off.

"We have no idea what's happening now," Surono said. "It looks like we may be entering an even worse stage now. ... It's up to Merapi from here."

The danger zone was widened from six miles to nine because of the heightened threat. Soldiers and police blocked all roads leading up the mountain. (AP)

More Threats to Iraqi Christians

Conversion dispute is spurring attacks, al-Qaeda group says

Baghdad

Al-Qaeda's front group in Iraq has threatened more attacks on Christians after a siege on a Baghdad church that left 58 people dead, linking the warning to claims that Egypt's Coptic Church is holding women captive for converting to Islam.

The Islamic State of Iraq, which has already claimed responsibility for Sunday's assault on a Catholic church Mass in downtown Baghdad, said its deadline for Egypt's Copts to release the women had expired and its fighters would attack Christians wherever they can be reached.

"We will open upon them the doors of destruction and rivers of blood," the insurgent group said in a statement posted late Tuesday on militant websites.

The Islamic State of Iraq is an umbrella group that includes al-Qaeda in Iraq and other allied Sunni insurgent factions.

In announcing its reasons for Sunday's attack, which was the deadliest ever recorded against Iraq's Christians, the group said it had given the Coptic Church 48 hours to release the women it says had converted to Islam. The group also demanded the release of prisoners linked to al-Qaeda held in Iraq.

The group specifically mentioned two Egyptian women married to Coptic priests, who some believe converted to Islam to leave their husbands, as divorce is banned by the church.

Over the past few years in Egypt, arguments over alleged conversions have exacerbated Muslim-Christian tensions already high over issues such as the construction of new churches. The two communities generally live in peace, though clashes have taken place.

The conversion issue has become a rallying point for hard-line Islamists in Egypt. (AP)

Humbled Obama and emboldened Boehner talk cautiously of common ground

Washington

A chastened President Obama signaled a new willingness to yield to Republican demands on tax cuts and jettisoned a key energy priority on Wednesday, less than 24 hours after he and fellow Democrats absorbed election losses so severe he called them "a shellacking."

But he bluntly swept aside any talk of repealing his signature health care law — right after the House Speaker-in-waiting, Rep. John Boehner of Ohio, vowed Republicans would do everything they could to wipe the legislation off the books.

Boehner, a 60-year-old veteran of two decades in Congress, spoke at what amounted to his national debut as head of an incoming conservative majority that will include long-experienced lawmakers and tea party-backed political newcomers alike. He declared, "Our new majority will be the voice of the American people as they expressed it so clearly yesterday."

Speaking to reporters in the Capitol, Boehner said he and fellow Republicans hope the president "will continue to be willing to work with us" on the priorities of creating jobs and cutting spending. But, he added, "We're going to continue to renew our efforts for a smaller, less costly and more accountable government here in Washington, D.C."

Obama struck similar themes at his own news conference a few hours later, saying he was eager to

Little in Common

United on almost nothing, Barack Obama and John Boehner are the two faces of America's divided government. Both claim to speak for the people, yet they have had little to say to each other. It was telling that just about every mention of cooperation between them Wednesday was accompanied by insistence on more give by the other — the same formula for bitter gridlock that existed before voters tilted power toward Republicans. There's really no connection between them when they talk. That's how Boehner bluntly put it before the election, and the White House does not dispute the feeling. Obama is known to poke fun at Boehner's perpetual tan, and they both enjoy a good round of golf, but Obama surely has it right when he says the finding of common ground won't be easy. (AP) sit down with the leaders of both political parties "and figure out how we can move forward together." He added, "It won't be easy."

Sounding more conciliatory than in the past, the president said he was open to compromise with Republicans on their demand for an extension of all of the Bush-era tax cuts due to expire on Jan. 1, including those that apply to upper-income earners. He omitted mention of his campaign-long insistence that tax cuts be permitted to expire on upper-income families.

Boehner, too, was asked about the expiring tax cuts, and he replied simply that he continues to believe they should all be extended.

Questions about the health care law elicited far more forceful answers from both men. "We have to do everything we can to try to repeal this bill and replace it with commonsense reforms that will bring down the cost of health insurance," Boehner said. Earlier, he had called it a "monstrosity."

Obama would hear none of it.

"I think we'd be misreading the election if we thought that the American people want to see us for the next two years re-litigate arguments that we had over the last two years," he said.

On the morning after the election, there was little overt talk of the next election, now two years distant. But it was clearly on the minds of some.

Republican Rep. Eric Cantor of Virginia worried aloud that voters could turn against the GOP next time.

"Let us be under no illusion," he said. "Many of those who cast their vote for Republicans yesterday have their share of doubts about whether we are up to the task of governing, about whether congressional Republicans have learned our lesson." DAVID ESPO (AP)

Metro's Wireless Expansion

Efforts to strengthen cell signals are held up by safety maintenance

Imagine riding Metrorail and enjoying an uninterrupted cell phone signal between any two distant points in Washington's subway system.

It's a dream for smartphone and iPad users that is moving toward reality, but slowed by Metro's need to do maintenance and implement safety improvements on its rail network.

Metro agreed in 2008 to expand service as part of a funding agreement with Congress. Previously, a longstanding contract with Verizon had limited underground service to its customers and Sprint users (who had to pay roaming charges).

The options for riders expanded a year ago when AT&T, Sprint

Congress set a fall 2012 deadline for providing cell phone service throughout Metro.

and T-Mobile joined Verizon and launched service at 20 of the busiest underground platforms. Now the four carriers have installed new antennas and other equipment in preparation to extend signals to an additional 20 of Metro's 47 underground stations. The companies are also laying fiber-optic cables to connect all of the underground stations to their networks.

Congress set a fall 2012 deadline for providing service throughout the Metro system. The work, however, sometimes competes with Metro's efforts to maintain its system and replace deteriorating parts.

Metro riders say they are eager for more coverage.

Mike Lee commutes between a corporate IT job in Bethesda and the Potomac Ave. Station, reading newspapers on his iPad during the trip. Because of the signal fluctuations, he downloads updates before leaving home or while at a station where he can connect to AT&T. "If they expanded [service], it would make a big difference because I would have Internet access at all times," he said.

Rob Bruening, a program specialist for the Home Builders Institute, uses his AT&T phone in the stations mainly to receive e-mail.

"I'd like to see it through the whole system," he said. "If I'm on a conference call, it's important" to have full coverage. Now "I have to sit outside the system and wait, and I don't get home on time," he said. ANN SCOTT TYSON (THE WASHINGTON POST)

Gov. Martin O'Malley joins supporters to wave to passersby in Baltimore, thanking them for his election victory, on Wednesday. It will be O'Malley's second term.

O'Malley: No New Taxes in Budget

Md. governor offers plan for proposal a day after re-election

Annapolis, Md.

Looking ahead to his second term, Gov. Martin O'Malley said Wednesday his first budget proposal will reflect another challenging year with more cuts, but that no new tax proposals will be included in his January budget.

The Democrat said any increase in state revenue will come from more people landing jobs, not taxes.

"I'm looking for cuts — and a constant diet of cuts — until our economy comes back so that the revenues come back, and we've seen our revenues start to bump up because we've seen job creation actually in the positive zone for the first time in a long time," O'Malley said.

O'Malley defeated Republican former governor Robert Ehrlich on Tuesday 56 percent to 42 percent. O'Malley's victory was a bright spot for Democrats in a year when Republicans made big gains in winning governor's races in other parts of the country. O'Malley noted the losses before a meeting of the state's Board of Public Works.

"The Democratic Governors Association will meet in a smaller room this year," O'Malley said.

While O'Malley will have to address an estimated budget deficit of about $1.1 billion next year, he noted that's nothing new to him.

"Every year for the last three, we've had to close a gap of a billion or more dollars because of this recession, and we're going to have to do that next year, and I'm preparing a budget without any new taxes that will all be balanced with cuts and some transfers," O'Malley said. (AP)

Obama Invites Gray to Lunch

Washington

Washington Mayor-elect Vincent Gray has been invited to have lunch with President Obama.

The meeting on Dec. 1 will give the city's new leader a chance to meet with the president and discuss issues facing the District of Columbia.

Gray said Tuesday he received the invitation from a White House staffer.

Gray says that he plans to talk with Obama and with Republican leaders in Congress about how the city needs the freedom to write its own laws and its own budget. (AP)

Terps Tap Experience to Fill Void

With top scorers gone, UMd. upperclassmen must generate points

Terps Men's Hoops

Forty-four points have left the building.

That's the reality that Maryland coach Gary Williams faced this fall when he looked out on the practice floor and, for the first time in four years, did not see Greivis Vasquez or Eric Hayes or Landon Milbourne.

Those three now-departed seniors accounted for more than half the team's scoring last season and made up the soul of a team that snatched a share of the ACC championship and seduced fans with polar-opposite personalities — Vasquez the brash, shimmying showman, Hayes and Milbourne the quiet, consistent, lead-by-example guys.

In their absence, the Terrapins open the season on Monday against Seattle University in search of an identity — and points — while counting on a collection of supporting cast members to step to center stage.

"It's hard to replace them," senior guard/forward Cliff Tucker said. "This year we have a whole different team. I think we're going to be a lot quicker than we were last year and most of all we have to knock down shots."

Tucker is one of three seniors in a starting five solely made up of returning players. He's joined by senior guard Adrian Bowie, senior forward Dino Gregory, junior guard Sean Mosley and sophomore forward Jordan Williams.

"I think this year we all kind of have a chip on our shoulders, since the last three years we haven't really gotten to show what we can do," Tucker said. "Coach has basically told us that this is our team this year and we are going to get our chances."

Beyond the starters, Williams will be searching for a way to integrate five freshmen and a junior college transfer. In an exhibition game against Florida Southern last week, freshman point guard Terrell Stoglin scored nine points and freshman forward Haukur Palsson scored eight to go with five rebounds in limited minutes.

"The challenge this year is how many of those six can get into a rotation, because I like to play eight or nine players," Williams said. "If those guys can set up and do it then that would really help."

In the exhibition, the heavy lifting was done by the returning veterans and they'll be called on to do the same through at least the early part of the regular season. After opening with Seattle, College of Charleston and Maine, things get tougher fast. The Terrapins will travel to New York for the national rounds of the 2K Sports Classic where they'll face No. 5 Pittsburgh, followed by either No. 13 Illinois or Texas.

"For me, it's exciting," Gregory said. "That's why I came to Maryland. We all came to Maryland for that. We get to play big names. We look forward to all of the challenges that come along with that."

Titans Claim Moss

The Tennessee Titans have claimed wide receiver Randy Moss off the waiver wire. Tennessee passed on Moss in the 1998 NFL draft, choosing instead to take Kevin Dyson. Moss can help a team that has not won a playoff game since January 2004, and receiver Kenny Britt hurt his right hamstring last week and will miss the Titans' game Nov. 14 at Miami. Safety Michael Griffin tweeted "welcome Randy Moss" and All Pro running back Chris Johnson had been lobbying for the Titans to pick up Moss as well. (AP)

The winless Buffalo Bills have claimed outside linebacker Shawne Merriman off waivers in a midseason bid to improve their porous defense. The Bills announced the move Wednesday, a day after Merriman was placed on 24-hour waivers by San Diego. Buffalo (0-7) had the first option on acquiring the one-time feared pass rusher because it has the NFL's worst record. Waived players are awarded to the worst team that submits a claim. (AP)

Najar Named Top Rookie in MLS

17-year-old is youngest player by 4 years to win league award

D.C. United

The lone bright spot in D.C. United's very dark season was honored with some silverware on Wednesday, as midfielder Andy Najar was named the MLS rookie of the year.

The 17-year-old midfielder is the second D.C. player to win the honor — the interim coach and former owner of Najar's No. 14 jersey, Ben Olsen, was the first. Najar is four years younger than any previous honoree and is the first rookie of the year to advance through an MLS club's youth system, a watershed moment in American player development.

"A nice woman from the league called to tell me about the award. She told me to keep the news [quiet] until Wednesday, but I was just so excited," Najar said. "I don't have words in English or Spanish to describe my feelings."

Najar emigrated from Honduras when he was 13, attended Edison High School in Alexandria and eventually joined United's youth program. He signed a senior contract in March, and as the team crumbled around him, the coach was fired, and defenses began to single him out, he blossomed.

Najar scored seven goals this season, including five in MLS play, several of which were jaw-dropping. His skill on the ball and confidence in the attack was unique for a player that age, and earned him the team's MVP award.

"He could step into a World Cup venue and play the way he plays," Olsen said recently. "He just doesn't care where he's at. He just loves to play the game, and he plays it the proper way."

There are some intriguing questions attached to Najar's future. Will he receive offers from European clubs? Will he choose to represent the U.S. or Honduras?

For now, those can be put aside. Wednesday's award gives a beleaguered club something historic to celebrate. BRIAN STRAUS

Ex-Tigers Manager Anderson Put in Hospice

Hall of Fame member, 76, has complications caused by dementia

Major League Baseball

Former Detroit Tigers and Cincinnati Reds manager Sparky Anderson has been placed in hospice care at his Thousand Oaks, Calif. home for complications resulting from dementia.

Anderson's family said in a statement

Wednesday that they appreciate the support and kindness that friends and fans have shown throughout the Hall of Famer's career and retirement. The 76-year-old Anderson was inducted into baseball's Hall of Fame in 2000, culminating a major league career that included one nondescript season as a player and a historic run as a manager.

He won 2,194 games as a manager, which was the third-highest total in major league history when he retired, trailing Connie Mack and John McGraw. He now stands sixth. Anderson was the first manager to win World Series titles in both leagues and the only manager to lead two franchises in career wins.

He led Cincinnati's Big Red Machine to World Series wins in 1975-76. He won four National League pennants in Cincinnati from 1970-78, and then was fired after consecutive second-place finishes. (AP)

The Washington, D.C., native never guessed that the stage persona Prince Poppycock would become a cult favorite of millions of viewers on NBC's "America's Got Talent" this summer — or that those viewers would help him become one of the season's four finalists.

"[I saw] something that I literally thought was just for a certain demographic and realized that it had a much broader appeal — as long as I stopped taking off my clothes and telling naughty jokes," Quale said while on tour with "America's Got Talent," which stops at DAR Con-

Ahead of the show, Quale spoke to Express about Poppycock, opera and why he got involved with Dan Savage's "It Gets Better" online video project for LGBT youth.

The Original Love Vigilantes

Septime Webre's Washington Ballet takes on 'Romeo'

Theater

A fresh take on Shakespeare's "Romeo and Juliet" takes the doomed lovers and keeps them on their toes as Washington Ballet artistic director Septime Webre puts his own spin on the bard's tale at the Kennedy Center.

"Romeo and Juliet" is a very human story that suggests really great physicality and movement," Webre says. "It has very grand themes that are pertinent to today."

Webre, who has danced in "Romeo and Juliet" himself, depicts the lovers' relationship in an unexpected way.

"Fate has little to do with the story," he says. "These two characters are earnest young people who are genuinely in love, but it's a kind of love that's not accepted by the society in which they live."

He adds that there are "examples of this in the world around us, like the love between a black person and a white person, or between people of the same gender."

Webre built the ballet around Sergei Prokofiev's famous score, written in the 1930s.

"Prokofiev distilled the play into a glorious score, and intrinsic to the score is a really great structure," Webre says. "The score influenced greatly how I dealt with the play."

"The music has great contrasts with pure themes for Juliet and romantic, swirling sounds for the two lovers, and underneath there's a sense of tragedy," he says. "It contrasts amazingly with the music for the Capulet ball, which is so grand and ostentatious, supporting the notion of an authoritarian world in which love can't survive."

Give 'Hair' a Chance

A new production of the classic hippie musical kicks off at the Kennedy Center

Theater

In this town, we know the score: Politics is a game, and all sides play to win. But D.C. is also hallowed ground for freedom of speech, assembly and protest. Perhaps that's part of our attachment to the classic flower-child musical "Hair," which launched its 20-city tour last week at the Kennedy Center, where it will run through Nov. 21.

More than 40 years after its Broadway debut, "Hair" has had remarkable staying power for a show about a bunch of 20-somethings kids living in a park and singing about peace. The fact that the original flower children are now in their 60s and can afford tickets to Broadway shows may help the cause: "Hair" was revived in September 2007 for a three-day run in Central Park. But the demand for tickets sparked a six-week run a year later, followed by an updated Broadway production in 2009. Once again, "Hair" grabbed America by the fringed vest — and now, this new production is back for more rabble-rousing.

"There are people coming out that grew up in the '60s and will tell you stories about their brothers or friends that got drafted, or their draft card notice, what they were doing during that time period," says Steel Burkhardt, who plays the free-spirited Berger in the Kennedy Center production. "But the kids that come out and see the show and are affected by the show — they want to be part of a movement like this."

"Hair" is a quintessential story of youth and rebellion, but it is also a reminder of the importance of commitment in setting the wheels of progress in motion. Paris Remillard, who plays Claude and has been with the show since the 2007 production in Central Park, says the show serves as a wake-up call for young audiences today.

"If you give [people] just enough, then they feel like they have to maintain that just-enough state, and they don't do anything to disrupt that, and I think that's where America is right now."

"People in our generation really don't understand what a draft is like and what the political atmosphere was like at the time," he says. "If people are just happy enough, then they go with the flow. If you take too much away from people, they have to revolt and get back their rights. If you give them just enough, then they feel like they have to maintain that just-enough state, and they don't do anything to disrupt that, and I think that's where America is right now. We have a lot, but we're dissatisfied with a lot of things. But not enough that we're going to try to change the entire system that we live in, which is what was happening in the '60s. People didn't want to be sent off to die; they didn't want to be sent off to this war they didn't understand and didn't agree with."

Of course, in 1968, the kids were united on a solid grievance: An 18-year-old could be drafted but couldn't cast a vote for the president who'd be sending him there. The 26th Amendment wouldn't be ratified until 1971, largely in response to student protests.

But Burkhardt says he sees some parallels between then and now in terms of young people's speaking up. "In 2008, so many kids came out and voted, and look what happened: Your vote actually made a difference," he says. "It just shows you that [the] people's voice actually does matter — and I always thought it didn't. I was a skeptic."

So, now might be the perfect time for a "Hair" resurgence: The play is a reminder that the hippie legacy needs new blood.

"People who come to see the show who lived it then, my guess is that their feeling is bittersweet," Remillard says, "because they lived through it and they wanted those things to happen, so it's nostalgic. But also some of the things have changed that they fought for then, and some things haven't changed at all."

Featuring members of the show's original Broadway team, including Tony-nominated choreographer Karole Armitage, this

Worth a Thousand Words

A new show sees the Pre-Raphaelite painters through the lens of photography

Museums

In 1865, painter Dante Gabriel Rossetti had a series of photographs taken of his muse and model Jane Morris, who he would later immortalize in a series of paintings that have become synonymous with the term "Pre-Raphaelite."

Rossetti didn't copy his photographs directly. But, as a new exhibition argues, Rossetti — along with many of his contemporaries — was informed and inspired by photography, then a new and revolutionary visual form.

"Although he never based a particular painting on the photographs, once you look at them, you can see the ways Rossetti was incorporating much of the body language that's visualized in these photographs," says Diane Waggoner, associate curator of photographs at the National Gallery of Art and organizer of the NGA's new "The Pre-Raphaelite Lens: British Photography and Painting, 1848–1875."

You can see the ways Rossetti was incorporating much of the body language in these photographs.

Rossetti's photographs and paintings, several of which are included in the show, reveal the complex give and take between Pre-Raphaelite painting and photography. The first exhibition of its kind to explore that relationship and how it informed the development of each medium, "The Pre-Raphaelite Lens" includes more than 100 daguerreotypes and albumen prints, along with 20 paintings by Rossetti, John Everett Millais and William Holman Hunt.

The Pre-Raphaelite painters, alienated from many of the artistic conventions that defined academic painting at the time, "wanted to find a new visual language," Waggoner explains. "They were looking to reinvent and revitalize British art, to make a more realist art."

Photography offered a radically new approach to seeing the world.

At the same time, photographers were looking to Pre-Raphaelite art for similar inspiration. "They felt a certain amount of anxiety about the status of the new medium that they were using, and many of them wanted to establish it as a fine art," Waggoner explains. "So, the natural thing to do was to look at painting."

Waggoner worked to avoid any close resemblances between the images in the show: "It's more about finding and grouping paintings and photographs that shared a sensibility. There are some one-to-one pairs in the show, but many of them have looser, more complex relationships."

Future Islands in the Stream

The synthpop group puts down serious roots in Baltimore

Music

Synthpop group Future Islands calls Baltimore home, but lead singer Sam Herring didn't think the band fit into the city's music scene when its members moved there two years ago from North Carolina. Back then, they felt a bit like trespassers.

"When we moved here, we had plenty of friends that had been based in Baltimore for a while. But we felt like interlopers in the scene, something that was already happening," Herring says. "At this point, we feel at home here. And that's a great boost to our confidence level, which increases our level of working hard."

In fact, the whole point of moving to Baltimore was for Herring and the other members of Future Islands — who hit the Black Cat's backstage Thursday — to take their music more seriously. When Herring and other bandmates were in their first group, Art Lord & the Self-Portraits, they were "just 18-year-old kids who were looking to have a good time and make music so that we could play house parties." But with Future Islands, Herring says, "I put the most amount of my personal time into making music."

The band has more recently concentrated on writing mellower songs with honest lyrics, like those on the May release "In Evening Air," where Herring chronicled a relationship's end. But live, says Herring, "Hopefully, the music is very, very loud."

Seriously Strumming

Danielle Ate the Sandwich has a silly name but seriously shreds on the uke

Music

You'd think someone who played the ukulele under the professional moniker Danielle Ate the Sandwich would have an act that was a laugh riot. You'd be half-right.

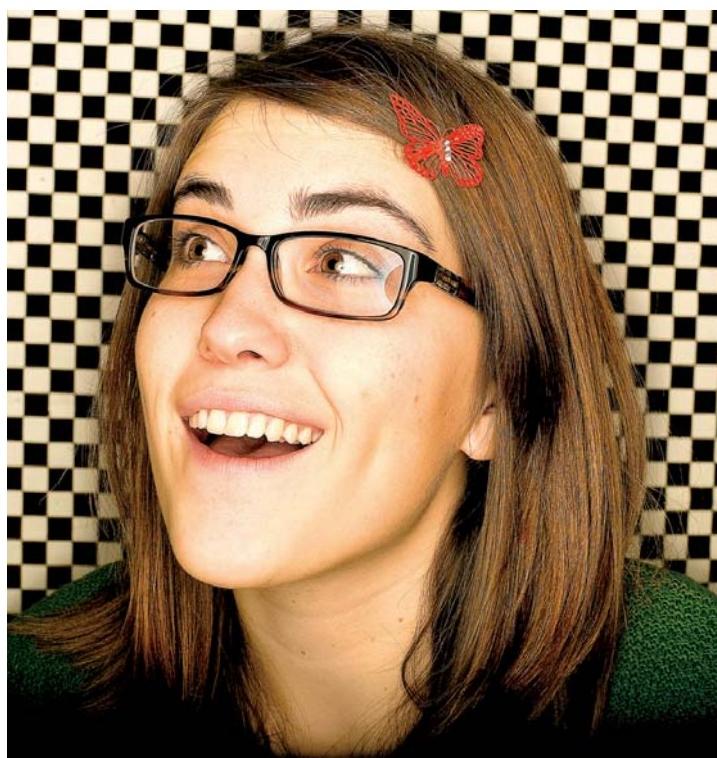

Danielle Anderson, 24, became a breakout YouTube star largely because of the comic introductions she gave her home videos — videos that have now been viewed more than 3.5 million times. Yet the songs on her third album, "Two Bedroom Apartment," eschew comedy for darker emotions such as wistfulness, regret and pensiveness.

If Jake Shimabukuro expanded the musical boundaries of the four-stringed Hawaiian instrument by making like Segovia, then Anderson is expanding the emotional range of the uke by making like Ingrid Michaelson. This sure ain't Tiny Tim. Or Don Ho.

"I think it's more serious," Anderson says of the album, which is her first professionally recorded effort. "And that wasn't intentional at all. I think I just may be getting older and I realize the importance of things. And also I got sick of people saying, 'Oh, you're so funny; I like your funny little songs.' I wanted to say, 'Hey, I might be a funny person sometimes, but I don't want my songs to be little and funny — ever."

Few people will consider any of the songs on "Two Bedroom Apartment" "little" or "funny." The songs on the 13-track album deal with issues such as cancer ("The Doctors"), broken families ("17 and Danielle Anderson brings a sweet power to songs that don't shy from the dark stuff.

53") and the way kids are indoctrinated into the military industrial complex ("Soldier"). And that's not counting the earnest relationship songs that make up the bulk of the disc.

"A lot of serious things happened to inspire some of those songs," Anderson says. "Some serious things in my life happened."

But all that doesn't mean that Anderson's upcoming show at Jammin' Java will be somber or depressing. Like in her videos, she likes to add a healthy dose of her wacky personality to the proceedings.

"I chose the name because I wanted it to catch people's attention."

"When I play live, I'm an entertainer as well as a singer-songwriter," she says. "I try to engage the audience by speaking to them, by looking them in the eye and telling stories and jokes. And that's important to me — to be just as entertaining in a live show as some people might think I am in a YouTube video."

Of course, choosing such an outré moniker has also kept Anderson from being thought of as too solemn.

"I didn't want to be a singer-songwriter with just a first and last name," she says. "I chose the name because I wanted it to catch people's attention." TONY SCLAFANI

May the Circle Remain Unbroken

Psychedelic legend Roky Erickson finds an unforced peace

Music

There were years when it looked like the world had lost Roky Erickson.

In the mid-'60s, Erickson led seminal Austin psych group the 13th Floor Elevators. He wrote some of the most powerful songs of that era, music that runs through the rock, folk and punk scenes of today.

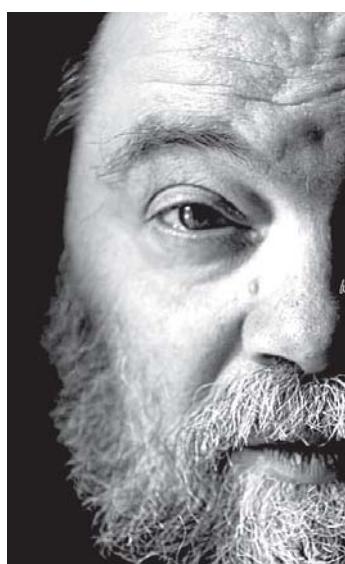

Then, he fell ill. Diagnosed with schizophrenia in the early '70s, Erickson struggled for decades with his genius and his demons, all the while making extraordinary music, haunting in its honesty and loneliness.

The early '00s found him a support network and relative stability, and he started playing sporadic shows. In April, Erickson released his first album in nearly 15 years, "True Love Cast Out All Evil," recorded with Okkervil River. The band embarked on a multicity tour, which stops at the Black Cat Friday.

Erickson says being back on stage is second nature. "I never get afraid. I just always think, 'Everything's gonna be all right.' And I'm pretty sure it's gonna be."

After a long period writing about horror-movie monsters — and the ones inside his mind — Erickson says he's finding inspiration of sorts in the Bible.

self," he says, "you can write a song instead about how true love casts out, well, everything."

Recent set lists have included covers of old faves like Little Richard.

"I play this one called 'Ooh! My Soul' — but you gotta be careful playing that one," Erickson says. "You should really have someone with you listening to those records."

For Erickson, music is a mystical force. Some would say he is, too.

"Mystical? I guess I could be," he says. "I read a lot of Edgar Cayce," a turn-of-the-century New Age philosopher. "But you gotta take it easy with him." SHAUNA MILLER (EXPRESS)

D.C. has unbeatable museums, a top-tier theater scene and a lots of options for musicians and visual artists. But, despite its dramatic cityscapes and constantly unfolding photojournalism opportunities, the city never had much of a reputation for photography — until 2008, when Chrome Inc.'s Theo Adamstein founded FotoWeek D.C.

"There had never been a city-wide award for excellent work, and ... there had never been a photography festival," Adamstein says. "Washington is a great city for it, since there are great museums, and thousands of photojournalists pass through the city every year."

In FotoWeek's inaugural year, exhibitions and programs focused on local photographers. But last year, FotoWeek went international, attracting photographers from dozens of countries.

"When you give exposure to undiscovered photographers and put together exhibitions all over the city ... the interest goes beyond the local, and photographers see it as a platform for showing their work," Adamstein says.

From Saturday through Nov. 13, you'll find photo-themed shows, lectures and parties popping up all across the District. In celebration of FotoWeek, the Corcoran Gallery of Art will also be offering free admission throughout the festival, and will be open all week from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Read on to find out our top picks for the festival, and check out the week's full lineup of events — including how to submit your own work — online at FotoWeekDC.org.

Brian Storm

Photographers tell stories with their cameras. But it's not enough to just snap a photo anymore; contemporary photographers need to disseminate them to as wide an audience as possible. Enter MediaStorm, a multimedia production studio and talent incubator. Site founder Brian Storm, former director of multimedia for MSNBC.com, will host several FotoWeek events. On Tuesday at 6 p.m., he'll be at the Corcoran Gallery of Art to discuss storytelling strategies in the digital age. He'll present an all-day workshop there Wednesday, covering approaches to narrative storytelling, reporting and how to create a successful business model. Visit Asmpdc.org for more information and to register for the event.

Bruce Davidson

Noted urban photographer Bruce Davidson will present the Newman Distinguished Visiting Lecture in Photography at the Corcoran Gallery of Art Saturday at 7 p.m. He'll discuss his 50-year career and his signature city landscapes shot in Paris, Los Angeles and elsewhere in the world. Davidson will look back on iconic works such as 1958's "Circus," which chronicled a vanishing big-top culture, and "Time of Change: Civil Rights Photographs, 1961-1965," which includes images of a rally in Harlem, Ku Klux Klan cross burnings and civil rights marches in Birmingham and Selma, Ala. "Outside Inside," a three-volume collection of Davidson's work, was recently reissued, and he'll be on hand to sign it after the lecture.

Val Proudkii

Local photog Val Proudkii has won FotoWeek honors every year since the fest opened. This year, two photos from his Cuba series have garnered accolades: An image of young boys playing ball in the street took third place in the Contemporary Life category, and a photo of a man leaping from a high wall into the water below, pictured above, won first place in the Travel category. Proudkii says FotoWeek offers photographers an outlet "to share ideas and be recognized." "There's participation not just from all over the country, but the world," he says. "It's just a well-established festival."

Night Gallery & Night Visions

Some of FotoWeek's most exciting events take place after sunset. Night Gallery will project works onto the exteriors of eight notable local buildings, including the Human Rights Campaign and the National Museum of the American Indian. Developed by Architectural Media's Marc Herring, the projections will present award-winning photography focused on social and political themes. "Each museum or building has programming related to its mission," Adamstein says. The U.S. Holocaust Memorial Museum will feature photographs from Darfur and Sudan and the Newseum will display photos of Hurricane Katrina. For Night Visions on Saturday, photographers can send in their own photos to a team of FotoWeek editors, who will curate a show at FotoWeek D.C. Satellite Central in Georgetown.

take five

"Saw 3D," the last film in the franchise, finds even more fun ways to kill people.

1 Saw 3D

In the last of the horror franchise, a deadly battle rages over Jigsaw's legacy while a group of Jigsaw survivors gather to seek the support of self-help guru and fellow survivor Bobby Dagen, a man whose dark secrets unleash a new wave of terror.

2 Paranormal Activity 2

Director Tod Williams takes the helm with the sequel to the horror phenomenon "Paranormal Activity." The terror continues as a young couple cope with a potentially evil spirit in their suburban home.

3 Red

"Red" joins a long and mostly undistinguished line of recent movies whose upper-middle-aged stars play AARP members who refuse to go gently into genteel cinematic dotage.

4 Jackass 3D

Are you highbrow enough to see "Jackass 3D"? In this third film, Johnny Knoxville and his merry band of idiots once again subject one another to a series of stunts and pranks meant to test the limits of the human body (and the human gag reflex).

5 Hereafter

By pulling its punches and refusing to make outlandish claims about a world beyond this one, "Hereafter" avoids the pitfalls of other supernatural thrillers. But it's unable to avoid the even soggier conventions of the movie romance.

DREAMWORKS ANIMATION

Tina Fey and Will Ferrell voice the characters Roxanne Ritchi and Megamind, respectively, in "Megamind," in theaters Friday.

Will Ferrell Is Kinda Blue

Actor Q&amp;A

Batman hates the Joker, and Lex Luthor despises Superman; it's all very dramatic and manly. But part of the reason Will Ferrell decided to voice bad guy Megamind in the upcoming film of the same name was the unprecedented relationship he shares with nemesis Metro Man.

"Megamind gets to kind of flip-flop between being evil and then ultimately learning how to be good," Ferrell says. "That just felt like something that I hadn't ever seen before."

Ferrell spoke with Express about voice acting and injecting his personality into a melon-headed blue alien.

You've played the outcast and the popular guy before, and Megamind is kind of both. How did you understand this character?

[I] think, comedically, what I can do lends itself to the portrayal of Megamind because even though he's "evil," he's really kind of a vulnerable, sweet guy who just wants to be accepted and loved like everyone else.

The movie uses AC/DC, Guns N' Roses and Michael Jackson for Megamind's theme music. What did you listen to getting fired up for the character? Oddly enough, I listened to Burt Bacharach. ... But I loved those choices because Megamind has this little bit of Mick Jagger in him.

"Even though he's 'evil,' he's a vulnerable, sweet guy who just wants to be loved."

— WILL FERRELL, VOICE OF MEGAMIND, ON THE LARGE-NOGGINED VILLAIN.

Were you able to improvise things with the character that weren't in the script?

There's a couple things that I love. ... The fact that this character who is supposed to be smart and articulate mispronounces words throughout the film — that was something we started coming up with. And the other thing I love was getting to do the voice of the Space Dad character, and that we had this little strange homage to [Marlon] Brando that actually stays in the movie. It's one thing when it's making all of us laugh at the recording session, but to actually keep it in the film, those are like the fun, small creative victories that you have. ROXANA HADADI

United by Indie Film at the AFI

indies &amp; arties

Each year, Todd Hitchcock travels to Berlin, Cannes, Karlovy Vary and Toronto not to meet with ambassadors but to attend film festivals. The mission: to bring back the best in film for the AFI's European Union Film Showcase.

This year, every member of the EU is represented somewhere in the 42-film showcase, which runs from Thursday to Nov. 23.

The fest has been running for 23 years now, and full representation is unusual, Hitchcock says.

"Some of the smaller countries like Malta or Cyprus don't have film industries that produce feature films every year," he says. "But this year, the stars aligned."

COURTESY/WILD BUNCH DISTRIBUTION

"Mr. Nobody" is actually a little-known actor named Jared Leto, who's 119 years old.

Hitchcock offered Express some of his picks for the festival:

► "Mr. Nobody" (Nov. 6 and 7), is a "mind-blowingly awesome sci-fi epic," in which the last living mortal on Earth (Jared Leto as Nemo Nobody) recounts his 119-year life in a world where science has conquered aging and death.

► "All That I Love," (Nov. 6 and 9) combines "Romeo and Juliet," John Hughes movies and punk films in a story set in 1981 during Poland's Solidarity movement.

► Romania's "If I Want to Whistle, I Whistle" (Nov. 20 and 23) is a case study about a juvenile delinquent days from release and his vagabond mother.

► "The Robber" (Nov. 13 and 14) is Austria's "kind of an existential crime movie," in which a bank-robbing marathoner prepares for a race after being paroled — and falls back into his old habits.

► Comedies include Ireland's "Zonad" (Nov. 12 and 13) about one man's quest to do as little as humanly possible, and Germany's "Friendship!" (Nov. 13 and 17), a fish-out-of-water story of two German boys' adventures in San Francisco.

Community Communication

It takes a good hook to get us excited about film festivals anymore, but the Worldaf Cinema Festival has it. This weekend-long program showcases films by and about deaf and hard-of-hearing people. Long films, short films, narratives and documentaries — and it all culminates in an awards ceremony where everyone can eat and drink, and listen to and watch the acceptance speeches. → Gallaudet University, 800 Florida Ave. NW; Thu.-Sun., $10; 202-651-5085, Wdcf.gallaudet.edu. (New York Ave.)

3 Sweet Thing

Forget Edie Sedgwick: Our favorite Andy Warhol muse is Candy Darling, the gorgeous transgender superstar who inspired the Velvet Underground and the Rolling Stones. Director James Rasin's "Beautiful Darling" traces the performer's life through her letters and diaries in flashbacks voiced by Chloe Sevigny. → Hirshhorn Museum and Sculpture Garden, 7th Street and Independence Avenue SW; Thu., 8 p.m., free; 202-633-1000. (L'Enfant Plaza)

Headbangers Ball

Filmmaker Jeff Krulik (of "Heavy Metal Parking Lot" cult fame) tackles Northern Virginia's underground hard-rock scene of yore with a panel discussion that includes record execs, music historians and rock critics who remember when Alice Cooper performed at Northern Virginia Community College. We heard he bit the head off a bat! Krulik and crew set the record straight Saturday at Artisphere. → Artisphere, 1101 Wilson Blvd., Arlington; Sat., 3 p.m., free; Arlingtonarts.org. (Rosslyn)

Girls Get Busy

Book release parties are usually staid affairs: wine, cheese, stealing Jonathan Franzen's glasses. Not so for "Girls to the Front: The True Story of the Riot Grrrl Revolution," which launches with a an old-school panel discussion and punk show (with Trophy Wife and others) at St. Stephen's, sponsored by Girls Rock D.C. and Positive Force. Gather around, children, and read of Bratmobile, pictured, who saved our 15-year-old sanity around here. And who had totally sweet bug shades. → St. Stephen and the Incarnation Episcopal Church, 16th and Newton streets NW; Fri., 7 p.m., free; Positiveforcedc.org, Girlsrockdc.org.

Moveable Feast

Halloween came and went, and you've probably eaten half your weight in candy. But Thanksgiving is still weeks away, so there's plenty of time to stuff your face in the meantime with Brie, mini-Caprese sandwiches and crab bisque. Head to the Annapolis Food and Wine Festival to sip local and international wines, taste dishes from area restaurants and check out cooking demonstrations. Graze offerings from more than 20 fancy local joints, including Hell Point Seafood and Pusser's Caribbean Grille. There's even a special wine and cheese pairing at each stop. Local chefs plan Turkey Day spreads for would-be hosts who want all the fixings but none of the fuss

With all the planning, prepping, cooking, and cleaning

that goes into creating a memorable Thanksgiving feast, it can turn into a Herculean endeavor. This year you can nix all of that hard work and make a reservation instead. Dining out on the big day can save you time, sanity and an eternity in the kitchen.

COURTESY RITZ-CARLTON

701 Relish the flavors of fall with executive chef Ed Witt's three-course feast. Openers include pumpkin soup with apple and rosemary beignets, and sage leaves stuffed with venison and accompanied by quince puree. For your main dish, go nontraditional with a suckling pig with sausage stuffing, or stick to the classic roasted turkey with stuffing and mashed potatoes. $45 per adult, $20 for children 10 and under. • 701 Pennsylvania Ave. NW; 202-393-0701, 701restaurant.com.

1789 Traditionally prepared turkey with all the trimmings is on the menu at 1789, because says executive chef Daniel Giusti, "people don't want dolled-up food on Thanksgiving; they want great turkey with great fixings." Sides include an oyster and applewood smoked bacon gratin that is made with oodles of aged Gruyère. As for the ham, the pigs are brined for a month with bay leaves, brown sugar and curing salt before being boiled and roasted. The outcome is pink, tender, a little salty and a little sweet. The three-course menu is $50 per person, or diners can order à la carte.

• 1226 36th St. NW; 202-965-1789, 1789restaurant.com.

2941 Executive chef Bertrand Chemel may have been born in France, but he enjoys the Thanksgiving tradition. "It's a long day," he admits. "But you can feel the spirit of the holiday all the way back in the kitchen." Choose among four entrees: turkey breast with chestnut stuffing, a braised short rib paired with a rib-eye, chestnut ravioli, and a bouillabaisse of halibut, garlic sausage, and New Zealand mussels. Desserts include a pumpkin Baked Alaska. "It's our way of bringing together my American and French influences," Chemel says. The three-course dinner is $65 per person.

• 2941 Fairview Park Drive, Falls Church, Va.; 703-270-1500, 2941.com.

Bibiana Osteria-Enoteca Why do turkey only one way, when it can be done twice as nice? Executive chef Nicholas Stefanelli roasts the juniper-lard encrusted breast, then braises the leg with shallots, wild mushrooms and celery root. If you're not in the mood for all that sleep-inducing tryptophan, he offers a blade steak with foie

Take In

Serves Up

Want to stay home? Have your meal catered by a local restaurant. Whether you tell your guests or not is up to you. Ritz-Carlton (D.C.) executive chef David Serus' "Turkey to Go" includes the bird, trimmings such as country bread stuffing, butternut squash soup, and honey-roasted root vegetables, and either pumpkin or apple pie. The whole shebang costs $269 and feeds six. Pick-up is on Thanksgiving Day between 11 a.m. and 4 p.m. To order: 202-974-5566, Ritzcarlton.com. N.M.

basted Maine lobster, Virginia striped bass with toasted hazelnut crunch and a heritage chocolate turkey with chestnut stuffing. For dessert, stray from the ordinary with a Kabocha squash sticky toffee pudding that's paired with butter pecan ice cream and pecan nougatine. $90 per person.

• 2800 Pennsylvania Ave. NW; 202-944-2026, Bourbonsteakdc.com.

Blue Duck Tavern

Take casual to the next level with this bigger-than-a-Macy's-parade-float buffet brunch. Appetizers — including seasonal salads, cheeses and breads — are set out in the open kitchen, while desserts are on display in the pastry pantry. The star entrées here are the free-range organic turkeys. $90 per person for adults. $45 for children between 6 and 12. Children under 6 are free. • 1201 24th St. NW; 202-419-6755, Blueducktavern.com.

Sou'Wester Get ready to loosen your belt a few notches. Start off with soup or salad before moving on to the buffet, which includes local oysters, North Carolina shrimp and charcuterie, and sides such as butternut squash gratin and two types of stuffing. Turkey and ham are carved by the chefs in the dining room. Choose from pumpkin, apple or chocolate-pecan pie as a sweet finale, if you can fit it in. $65 per adult. $30 per child 6-12 years old. Children 5 and under are free.

• 1330 Maryland Ave. SW; 202-787-6868, Mandarinoriental.com/washington/dining/souwester.

Bourbon Steak

"Thanksgiving is my favorite holiday of the year," says executive chef David Varley. "Hands down. No competition." He goes all out for the festivities, starting diners off with appetizers like crisped sweetbreads, warm Rappahannock River oysters, and roasted chestnut soup with spiced marshmallows and foie gras. Entrées include a brown butter

Expansion

When there's a chill in the air, things heat up at Rustico. This fall that means a meaty brown-sugar-braised bone-in short rib with blue cheese and dried-cherry risotto ($27), and butternut squash agnolotti (a type of ravioli) with lobster and brown butter and hazelnut sauce ($27). Both are available at the restaurant's new 260-seat Arlington location.

A staple in Alexandria since 2006, Rustico expanded to Ballston on Oct. 26. "There was definitely a need for what we think we're bringing here," executive chef Steve Mannino says.

And what the new spot brings is a twist on the traditional, says Rustico owner Michael Babin. "[Mannino] likes to cook with fire. He uses a lot of traditional techniques, but in every dish, he adds elements or tweaks those traditions in ways that really make them modern."

For instance, there are appetizers ($8 to $13) such as carrot hummus topped with spiced

For Rustico patrons excited by a new location but afraid of too much change, chef Steve Mannino keeps a few favorites on the menu such as the grilled Caesar salad.

lamb, crumbled feta and pita wedges, ($13) and grilled Caesar salad with Parmesan croutons ($9). Entrees include lemon-amaretto-glazed Arctic char with cauliflower two ways, green-bean almondine and garlic bread crumbs ($24); and eggplant Parmesan with buffalo mozzarella, roasted eggplant puree, and olive and fennel salad ($16).

"It's definitely rustic; it's not too complicated. It's things that are ... hopefully, done a little better than people at home can do them."

Rustico makes all its pasta in-house and also serves pizzas — with fig and prosciutto on top, for instance ($16) — from its wood-fired oven. As the temperature continues to fall, Mannino plans to introduce a salt-roasted beet salad and cheese fondue.

"It's definitely rustic; it's not too complicated," Mannino says. "It's things that are, you know, hopefully, done a little better than people at home can do them."

A signature dessert is the red-velvet cheesecake, topped with whipped cream and chocolate-covered pretzels ($8), and an apple pie sundae made of caramelized apples, cinnamon ice cream, brown-sugar crumbles and candied walnuts ($11) is a special for fall. But closer to Mannino's heart is Mama Mannino's ricotta doughnuts ($7), a recipe from his grandmother.

Well-known for its vast selection of beers, the Arlington Rustico bests its sister location with 443 options — 400 bottles, 40 drafts and three casks, with gluten-free options in the mix. STEPHANIE KANOWITZ

Dine & Dash

Primped Pastries: Rachel Thebault — D.C. native turned Manhattan confectioner and owner of Tribeca Treats — just published her first recipe book, "Sweet CHIC: Stylish Treats to Dress Up for Any Occasion." Comparing brownie baking to accessorizing the little black dress, Thebault simplifies a slew of sugary staples, offering variations for every occasion. Is the chocolate-chip cookie really the white T-shirt of baking? Find out in an interview with Thebault at Expressnightout.com. ## Naughty Treehouse

The Parents Television Council decried magazine pics of underdressed female stars of "Glee." Should the PTC be equally dismayed by the "Treehouse of Horror" episode on Sunday's "Simpsons," shown above?

In segment No. 1, Milhouse drowns. In segment No. 2, a bikini-clad

Marge and Homer are at sea and rescue a stranded guy, who later seems to — kids, don't read this next line — feel up Marge's cartoon hooters, but it turns out he is fiddling with the dials of a radio in front of her chest. Also, Homer murders many people and impales a pelican.

In a "Twilight" spoof, Marge serves roasted Ned Flanders to vampires. And "Sesame Street's" Count bites Big Bird.

I consulted my college-age daughter, a former child. She opines: "Kids don't get the [dirty] jokes, where it doesn't take any 'getting' to see a character from 'Glee' wearing barely anything and sucking a lollipop." On the other hand, the laugh-starved "Simpsons" episode seems to say, "Look how naughty we are" instead of, "Look how funny we are."

Best exchange: Vampire Edmund to Lisa: "You have beautiful eyes." Lisa: "They're just dots in circles."

Hedwig and the Angry Minister: Why are India's wild owls disappearing? Indian environment minister Jairam Ramesh blames the Harry Potter franchise, which, he says, is leading to increased sales of the birds on the black market. "Following Harry Potter, there seems to be a strange fascination even among the urban middle classes for presenting their children with owls," Ramesh was quoted as saying by the BBC. (EXPRESS)

Irresistible Downey

Even at his worst, the 'Due Date' actor can't seem to shake our affection for him

Personalities

Robert Downey Jr. spits in a dog's face, abandons his traveling companion at a rest stop and gut-punches an unruly child in his new comedy "Due Date" — and he's the film's protagonist.

"I love that we've actually gotten more push-back from [me] spitting in the dog's face than punching a human child in the stomach," quips the "Iron Man" star during a recent press conference to promote the outrageous road-trip movie.

Director Todd Phillips, who helmed last year's sleeper hit "The Hangover," figures audiences will excuse Downey's on-screen behavior because of what his character endures — and because Downey himself is so charismatic.

The darkly handsome actor plays a Los Angeles architect named Peter who is eager to get home from an Atlanta business trip to attend the delivery of his first child. At the airport, he has the misfortunate to run into a gratingly delusional man-child named Ethan, played by "Hangover" star Zach Galifianakis.

Through a series of unfortunate events caused by Ethan, Peter is put on the no-fly list and left with no choice but to share a car with Ethan in order to get home on time. It's a rough road ahead, though, for this

The Calm In the Storm

Downey, who in the past has battled drug addiction, describes making "Due Date," left, as a cathartic experience. "It was an invitation for me to get in touch with everything that annoys me about everyone and all the fear I have about everything that everyone can relate to," says the Manhattan-born actor. "In a way, I felt like I was a conduit to this. It was very pleasant." A.D.

"Every time I reach critical mass and I'm in the right place ... I feel the director and I have become a third thing, and that's the character."

uptight father-to-be who is forced to spend the next three days traveling across the country with a troublemaker and his equally annoying French bulldog, Sonny.

A veteran performer with a "bad boy" past, Downey is enjoying a successful streak of movie roles that have reignited his career. It started two years ago with his turn as a billionaire arms manufacturer turned superhero in the box office hit "Iron Man." A hit sequel followed in May, and another installment is in the works.

Also in 2009, Downey enjoyed a successful turn as the classic detective in "Sherlock Holmes," which is slated for a sequel due out next year. In "Tropic Thunder," a 2008 box office hit, he played a desperate, arrogant Australian actor who gets caught up in a real world conflict while filming a movie. His comedic performance landed him a supporting actor Academy Award nomination.

The 45-year-old, whose roller-coaster career has echoed the ups and downs of his personal life, credits part of his recent luck to the filmmakers with whom he has worked.

"Every time I reach critical mass and I'm in the right place ... I feel the director and I have become a third thing, and that's the character," he says. "I always feel like I'm playing an aspect of the director, particularly when he's an auteur," he continues. "It's a way of almost making him a proud parent. I'm a bit of an appendage of some aspect of the director." ANGELA DAWSON (ENTERTAINMENT NEWS WIRE)

Careful Creativity

Indie dance punk duo Matt & Kim share faves from their new, studio-produced disc

Album Feature

Matt Johnson from Matt & Kim wants to make sure you know that the dance punk duo's new album, "Sidewalks," isn't less raw than last year's "Grand" just because they worked on it in a real studio — as opposed to Johnson's parents' house.

"We had the same objective we always had when we go into making an album: Making music that Kim and I would like to listen to," Johnson said of his work with partner Kim Schifino.

"But the album might sound a touch slicker than our last album."

Along with producer Ben Allen, who has worked with artists such as Animal Collective and Deerhunter, Johnson and Schifino created the 10-track "Sidewalks." Johnson spoke with Express about some of his favorite tracks on the album.

OPENER "BLOCK AFTER BLOCK"

"We wanted definitely to set a mood with the opening track, and Kim actually claims 'Block After Block' to be her favorite on the album. But we definitely wanted to start it off upbeat ... and Kim said it made her want to shake her booty."

Matt Johnson and Kim Schifino recorded a new set of bubbly beats on "Sidewalks."

Sidewalks

Matt & Kim

FIRST SINGLE "CAMERAS"

"On 'Grand' ... songs like 'Daylight' and 'Good Ol' Fashioned Nightmare' ... were two of our favorites from square one and ended up being two listener favorites as well, and we kind of took that as [the] direction to go in. And I think things like 'Cameras' spawn from that beat — those beats of those songs definitely come from hip-hop. Kim and I are big hip-hop fans, and the songs have a lot of hip-hop influence."

"RED PAINT"

"Basically, the reason I play keyboard is I found this keyboard in my neighbor's garage when I was 15 and none of us at 15 could figure out how to make a musical instrument that didn't make weird, robotic noises, but a few years later I ended up figuring out how to play it. And I was on that keyboard again and I was playing around with it, like, when I was 15, and these weird sounds ... and that tone came out of it and brought out the rest of the song."

"NORTHEAST"

"Even though we hear everyone saying that the album is dead ... it's still very important to us to make a cohesive album, something you can listen to beginning to end, that is fulfilling like a movie would be. 'Northeast' came way at the end of writing the album, where we felt we really wanted to change the pace."

Mixed Media

"TOY STORY 3" (G, 103 MINUTES)

Plenty More to Play With

Woody (voiced by Tom Hanks), Buzz (Tim Allen), Jessie (Joan Cusack) and their toy-box friends return to the screen in a film set during the week before Andy goes to college. Buzz, Jessie and the gang are sent to a day-care center that winds up being, as one survivor puts it, a place of squalor and despair, "run by an evil bear who smells of strawberries." The toys' break-out from the day-care center winds up being the ballast of the film.

DVD extras: Include "Day and Night" short film; "The Gang's All Here, Toys!" epilogue; and "A Toy's Eye View: Creating a Whole New Land" featurettes; "You've Got a Friend in Me" music video. (THE WASHINGTON POST)

The Mean Streets of Beantown

Dennis Lehane brings back the 'Gone, Baby, Gone' detective duo

Book Q&A

Author Dennis Lehane, 45, has been writing since college, and he knows mornings are when he's at his creative best. But with age comes marriage, children and responsibility — and Lehane's schedule, just like him, is more mature now.

"The older you get, the more domesticated you get, the more you have other responsibilities, the more you can't just whip out the bottle of scotch and the pack of Marlboros and write until 5 in the morning," said

Lehane, author of film-friendly books such as "Mystic River," "Gone, Baby, Gone" and "Shutter Island."

Despite his changing schedule, Lehane's output is consistent: intense, dramatic portraits of life in Boston. His new novel, "Moonlight Mile," is a sequel to 1998's "Gone, Baby, Gone"; it focuses on investigators Patrick Kenzie and Angela Gennaro, about whom he hasn't written since 1999's "Prayers for Rain." Lehane spoke with us about getting reacquainted with his creations after a decade apart.

You grew up in Boston and write about Boston. How much of your life in the city shapes your novels? Well, they say "write what you know," but that doesn't mean if you grow up the son of a cobbler, write about shoes. It means, write about what you know emotionally. I very early on realized that people ### get back in that mindset?

They started talking to me again. I missed them, and it was fun to bring them back into the fold.

Your works lack conventionally happy endings. Do you not believe in them?

Things are happy in the moment and everybody gets what they need, which is what art is about and what narrative art is about — getting what you need, not necessarily what you want. I believe in a happy ending; I just don't believe in candy canes and pink lemonade. Sometimes I'm writing something that just organically says to me, "This is a tragedy" — "Mystic River" was a classic tragedy, but it wasn't meant to be, "Life sucks, then you die." I hate those endings. But if the confluence of events in a story leads to a painful truth, then that's what it leads to. ROXANA HADADI

Chart-Topper

Celebrate Now

Taylor Swift fans have spoken — more than a million times. The country-pop superstar sold more than 1 million copies of her new album, "Speak Now," to debut at the top of the Billboard album chart this week. Billboard.com said Wednesday that it's the biggest debut since 50 Cent's "The Massacre" five years ago. Swift, 20, responded to the news with a tweet on Wednesday morning: "... Can't... Believe... This... You guys have absolutely lit up my world. Thank you." (AP)

Horoscope

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) You can draw on tradition and still come up with something that is uniquely your own, but you have only so much time to get it done.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) It's important you do things in the right order; there are many risks involved if you do not follow the rules.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You may have to set aside the playbook and follow your instincts as you improvise to meet an unexpected challenge.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) It's time to demonstrate to another that you have what it takes to live up to expectations. By day's end, you'll receive much acclaim.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) You may have to wait longer than expected before you can dive into something you've been looking forward to for some time.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You may think that you're sitting pretty, but the truth is that things are much more uncertain than you can possibly know.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Your thinking is likely to change somewhat, and as a result you're likely to recognize certain opportunities that were hidden yesterday.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) You can go against the grain a bit and still score many points, especially when you find yourself in a situation not of your own making.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) The tide of public opinion may not be to your liking, but you can do much to turn your critics into avid supporters in little time.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Self-control is key; you don't want to let others see you letting your emotions rule your actions. Much is riding on your decisions.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You'll have the chance to take your game to the opposition in a way that is not only challenging but also quite daunting. You can win.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) You can satisfy your taste for adventure without straying too far from home. A certain endeavor fascinates you in a new way.

Help Us Have a Baby:

Loving Couple Seeks Egg Donor

I am a happily married woman with a full and interesting life. My husband and I are blessed with close and loving families with many nieces and nephews. Even though we cherish the time spent with our families, we still long for a child of our own.

Luckily, I can become pregnant, but I need an Egg Donor's help. Our dream Donor is 21-31, intelligent, fair-skinned, small-to-medium boned, with an excellent personal and family health history.

Egg Donor Needed $8,500 COMPENSATION

We want our donor to have the best care and support and so we have chosen a small, hands-on agency instead of a big clinic. Interested? Please email my attorney at Creative Family Connections: Donors@creativefamilyconnections.com

Creative Family Connections. Providing donors and clients with personal support and understanding...every step of the process.

WeekendPass makes the weekend historic.

TWU WUV

Will She Ever Find Out He Lied About Being the Pope?

In an interview with Harper's Bazaar, singer Katy Perry says "[she] always knew [she] wanted a great man of God." The actress recently married comedian Russell Brand but apparently doesn't see a contradiction. She also called herself "kind of a good girl." In one of her recent music videos, Perry sprays whipped cream out of her brassiere. (EXPRESS)

First He'll Be Appointed The Mayor of Funkytown

Rapper Jay-Z has told the BBC that he'd consider running for president. Well, actually, he said "Maybe in eight years, I'll be the president," and countless news outlets have spun the off-the-cuff remark into a declaration of political ambition that we consider unwarranted, but you're reading the gossip page, so you don't care. (EXPRESS)

We'd volunteer for the new Cabinet-level position of White House sommelier.

Father Figure

Yes, Miley, This Is, In Fact, Your Fault

Bret Michaels and Tish Cyrus are having an affair, according to Us Magazine. Michaels and Cyrus, who is in the process of divorcing her husband, Billy Ray, met when Michaels was recording a duet with her 17-year-old daughter, Miley, in February. (EXPRESS)

BAD MOVES

Next Season: 'Career Suicide With the Stars'

As a follow-up to the popular "Dancing With the Stars," ABC will air "Skating With the Stars" beginning this month. Bethenny Frankel is a confirmed contestant, since apparently nobody told her that skating is harder and colder than dancing, and that the probability of getting your fingers amputated by a careless razor-sharp skate is very high. HAUNTINGS

Who She Gonna Call?

Lady Gaga believes she is being haunted by a ghost, according to London's Evening Standard. The ghost is apparently named Ryan and has followed the pop star on tour. Gaga is both scared and irritated by the ghost, but a seance she organized did not help to release the ghost. Supposedly, she has spent thousands of dollars on ghost-detecting equipment and professional ghost busters. (EXPRESS)
